

Feminist & Queer Technoscience Studies

Kick-off meeting in Vienna

18 Dec 2012

While sciences & technologies are important places to negotiate our futures, they are strongly shaped by 'male' networks of privilege. This does not only become evident by looking on male-to-female ratios in natural sciences and engineering. Also scientific theories, knowledges and practices deeply incorporate gender (and other) biases.

Engaging with sciences & technologies from a critical perspective takes place in several academic and non-academic contexts. However, even there, feminist and queer perspectives are often underrepresented, neglected or not even thought about in the first place.

Therefore we aim to bring together people who want to take a critical, queer-feminist stance in sciences & technologies. We invite all interested people to our first meeting, which should act as a starting point for more networking, a working group, reading circles, publish/production collectives, or whatever else we come to think about.

Join us for our first meeting on:

Tuesday, 18th of December 2012, 7.00 pm

Where:

Seminarraum STS

Neues Institutsgebäude, Stiege II/6. Stock

Universitätsstraße 7, 1010 Wien

(if you're interested but can't make it this time, leave a message at faqts@diebin.at)

Looking forward to see you soon,

Daniela Schuh and Andrea*s Jackie Klaura [1]

[1] <https://jackie.noblogs.org/>

Feminist & Queer Technoscience Studies

Kick-off meeting in Vienna

18 Dec 2012

While sciences & technologies are important places to negotiate our futures, they are strongly shaped by 'male' networks of privilege. This does not only become evident by looking on male-to-female ratios in natural sciences and engineering. Also scientific theories, knowledges and practices deeply incorporate gender (and other) biases.

Engaging with sciences & technologies from a critical perspective takes place in several academic and non-academic contexts. However, even there, feminist and queer perspectives are often underrepresented, neglected or not even thought about in the first place.

Therefore we aim to bring together people who want to take a critical, queer-feminist stance in sciences & technologies. We invite all interested people to our first meeting, which should act as a starting point for more networking, a working group, reading circles, publish/production collectives, or whatever else we come to think about.

Join us for our first meeting on:

Tuesday, 18th of December 2012, 7.00 pm

Where:

Seminarraum STS

Neues Institutsgebäude, Stiege II/6. Stock

Universitätsstraße 7, 1010 Wien

(if you're interested but can't make it this time, leave a message at faqts@diebin.at)

Looking forward to see you soon,

Daniela Schuh and Andrea*s Jackie Klaura [1]

[1] <https://jackie.noblogs.org/>

What if feminism never happened?

What if feminism never happened?

Wait! This is real? What next?

Get the FAQTS queer

Feminist And Queer Technoscience Studies

Wait! This is real? What next?

Get the FAQTS queer

Feminist And Queer Technoscience Studies